ST. JOHN OF THE
CROSS: PILGRIM
BROTHER IN HOPE

A Life Rooted in Hope

Born Juan de Yepes in 1542, St. John of the Cross experienced hardships that shaped his life of trust in God. From his humble beginnings in Fontiveros, Spain, to the profound mystical heights of his writings, hope was a constant theme. Despite losing his father and brother at a young age, and enduring dire poverty, John's life demonstrates that hope thrives even in the most challenging circumstances. He found meaning and direction not in material security but in the enduring love of God.

John's work in a hospital for the sick and destitute revealed his deep compassion, but it also introduced him to life's harsh realities. Later, as a Carmelite friar and reformer alongside St. Teresa of Avila, John faced opposition, imprisonment, and even physical abuse. Yet, during these "dark nights," John found the light of hope in the Cross, which he described as the transformative path to divine union. His perseverance invites us to see our own challenges as opportunities for deeper trust in God.

In addition to his theological writings, John expressed his spirituality through poetry—considered among the finest in the Spanish language. His verses were not simply literary accomplishments, but vehicles for conveying the soul's yearning for God. With symbolic language and profound insight, his poems capture the interior journey of faith, desire, purification, and union. For John, beauty was a pathway to the divine: through poetic expression, he sought to awaken in others a longing for the Beloved who alone can satisfy the deepest desires of the human heart.

THE MOST CHALLENGING

The Cross as the Anchor of Hope

St. John taught that the Cross is not a symbol of despair but of ultimate hope. Life, he reminds us, often involves rough waters. In his writings, particularly the Dark Night of the Soul, he describes how God uses trials to purify our hearts and draw us closer. Just as an anchor stabilises a vessel in storms, hope grounds us when life feels uncertain or overwhelming.

His imagery of the "dark night" is not about loss but about the path to greater clarity and freedom. In the Ascent of Mount Carmel, he urges us to let go of attachments that weigh us down, so that we can climb higher toward union with God. This is not a solitary endeavour. St. John emphasises that our spiritual journey is communal. Together, as the Church, we encourage and support one another, especially when the waves seem strongest.

The Cross Leads to Joy

For St. John, the Cross is not an endpoint but a gateway to the joy of union with God. In his Spiritual Canticle, he describes the soul as a bride in search of her Beloved, ultimately finding joy and rest in divine love. This joyful hope sustains us through suffering and helps us recognise God's presence even in difficulties.

Hope is one of the theological virtues, received at baptism as a gift from God. Yet for St. John, hope is not entirely passive. It demands our active trust and perseverance. He invites us to embrace the Cross, not as a burden, but as a source of strength and transformation. As people of faith, we carry the Cross knowing that it leads us to life, renewal, and a deeper relationship with God.

Hope as a Pilgrim's Virtue

The spiritual life is a pilgrimage of hope. Hope is the virtue that keeps us moving forward, even when the path is unclear. It is the bridge between faith and love, allowing us to trust in God's plan and His ultimate goodness.

Like St. John, we are called to be pilgrims who embody hope for others. We are invited to walk with others in solidarity, offering encouragement and support to those struggling through life's trials. St. John teaches that our transformation is not only for ourselves but for the benefit of the whole Church and the world. Hope sends us outward—to serve, to love, and to proclaim the good news of Christ's victory over sin and death.

A Prayer for the Journey

O God of hope, through the intercession of St. John of the Cross, guide us on our journey toward you. When the waters are rough, anchor us in your love. When we feel lost, remind us that you are our destination. Help us to walk together as one family, embracing the Cross with faith, hope, and love. Amen.

May your journey be a time of renewal and encounter with the God who is our ultimate hope. Like St. John of the Cross, may you carry the Cross with courage and find joy in the path of faith. Let us walk together, as pilgrims in hope, drawing closer to the embrace of Christ, who meets us in every moment of our lives.

AS PEOPLE OF FAITH,
WE CARRY THE CROSS
KNOWING THAT IT LEADS US TO LIFE, RENEWAL, AND
A DEEPER RELATIONSHIP WITH GOD.
